Comment:

Gothic Architecture and Scholasticism, by Erwin Panofsky, is considered to be an important work on gothic architecture. The book is no longer in print, so cannot be purchased easily. The current copyright holder, if any, cannot be located. Searches were done in Books in Print and on the Internet to determine if the original publisher could be located. A University of Virginia class in medieval architecture has need of the work. If the book could be scanned and the text made searchable, the students would have the access they need, and the work would also be available for other scholarly pursuits.
