

Pi card-Jol ene-20050228110002

To: Julie L. Sigall
Associate Register for Policy & International Affairs

Date: 02/28/2005

Comment:

My Senior portraits were done by a friend of my boyfriends. He stamped his "business name" on the back of my portraits. The photos were taken in his garage and I purchased all of them. However, some of them have been ruined during moving. I wanted to go and copy my parents but since there was a stamp on the back they could not. The person took my photos in his garage and I have no clue what his actualy name is. The stamp only says "property of XXX Business". I have no way of tracking him down. I can scan them on my scanner at home but I will not get the quality that I would like to have. I think that the copyright on personal pictures is a joke. You pay for the pictures to begin with. If they don't want you to take them somewhere else to get them done cheaper then they should lower their proces and be completitive! But in my case I just want to reproduce something that was destroyed for my daughter.