I fully support making this material more easily available to the public. I believe it is only fair to pay someone for using their intellectual property. But, being unable to use material whose owner are extremely difficult to locate seems to serve no one well. As an arts and humanities programmer, I use other people's intellectual property for the good of the community often. Sometimes it is very difficult to track down the owner of images I'd like to use in printed promotional materials. This change would make my job easier and allow for a more efficient way of serving the public.
